“Throughout the ghettos of Nazi Europe, the Jews tried to organize resistance against the Germans. The arms for these resistance efforts came from weapons smuggled into the ghettos and homemade weapons. From 1941 to 1943, over 100 Jewish resistance groups fought back. The most famous of these resistance movements against the Nazis came from the young fighters of the Warsaw Ghetto.... The Warsaw Uprising was probably the largest single resistance operation organized and executed by a partisan body in World War II. In then end, the uprising lasted 2 months, which was longer that the French or the Polish held off the Nazis. The members of the Warsaw Uprising accomplished this feat with fewer weapons and no formal military training. It was nothing less than a revolution. The young Jews of Warsaw had resisted the Nazi machine head on with armed force. The significance of the uprising went far beyond those that bravely struggled and died...The thoughts of Mordechai Anielewicz may have best captured the uprising, “...what really matters is that the dream of my live has become true. Jewish self defense in the Warsaw ghetto has become a fact. Jewish armed resistance and retaliation became a reality. I have been witness to the magnificent heroic struggle of the Jewish fighters.”
